Financial Support

Several research organizations and institutions have provided funding to make this project possible. The 1999 International Microdata Access Group (IMAG) workshop at the University of Ottawa, at which several of these essays were originally presented, was funded by a Research Development Initiatives grant from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRCC).

Production of The Handbook of International Historical Microdata for Population Research was supported by contributions from:

Canadian Families Project
University of Victoria
Victoria, Canada

Institute of Canadian Studies
University of Ottawa
Ottawa, Canada

Danish Data Archive
Odense, Denmark

International Institute of Social History (IISH)
Dutch Scientific Organization (NOW)
Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Norwegian Historical Data Center
University of Tromsø
Tromsø, Norway

City Archives of Stockholm
Stockholm, Sweden

Demographic Data Base
Umeå University

Acknowledgements

The editors and authors wish to thank the staff of the Minnesota Population Center for their contribution to the production of this book. Technological improvements in internet communication, word processing software and electronic file transfer made it possible to produce a book with authors and editors physically located in twenty different places around the globe. In the end, however, it was the work of human hands that made this project feasible.

Our thanks go first to Steve Ruggles, Director of the MPC, who provided encouragement and support from the earliest planning stages– and who allowed this book take over the MPC seminar room. We especially want to thank research assistants Susan Brower, Becky Dennison, Sandy Jahn, Mike Lansing, Cassie Lucas, Jocelyn Shelton and Kate Wulff for their helpful comments, sharp eyes and abundant good humor.

Finally we are grateful to Beth Gipsky who created the beautiful cover for the book. It provides a visual reminder that the primary contributors to all our work are the people whose life stories can be read in the historical microdata described in these pages.
